

Hindu American Foundation
Promoting dignity, mutual respect, and pluralism.

India: DEMOCRACY IN DIVERSITY

India is a robust, multi-religious and multicultural, secular democracy. It is home to the vast majority of the world's Hindus and has sizeable Muslim, Christian, Buddhist, Jain, and Sikh populations, as well as small, but significant Bahai, Jewish, and Zoroastrian populations.

Birthplace of Dharmic Traditions

India is the birthplace of Hinduism, Buddhism, Jainism, and Sikhism. These collectively are often referred to as the 'Dharma' Traditions. The Dharma Traditions share many concepts such as dharma, karma, samsara, and moksha, though each independent religion understands and interprets them differently.

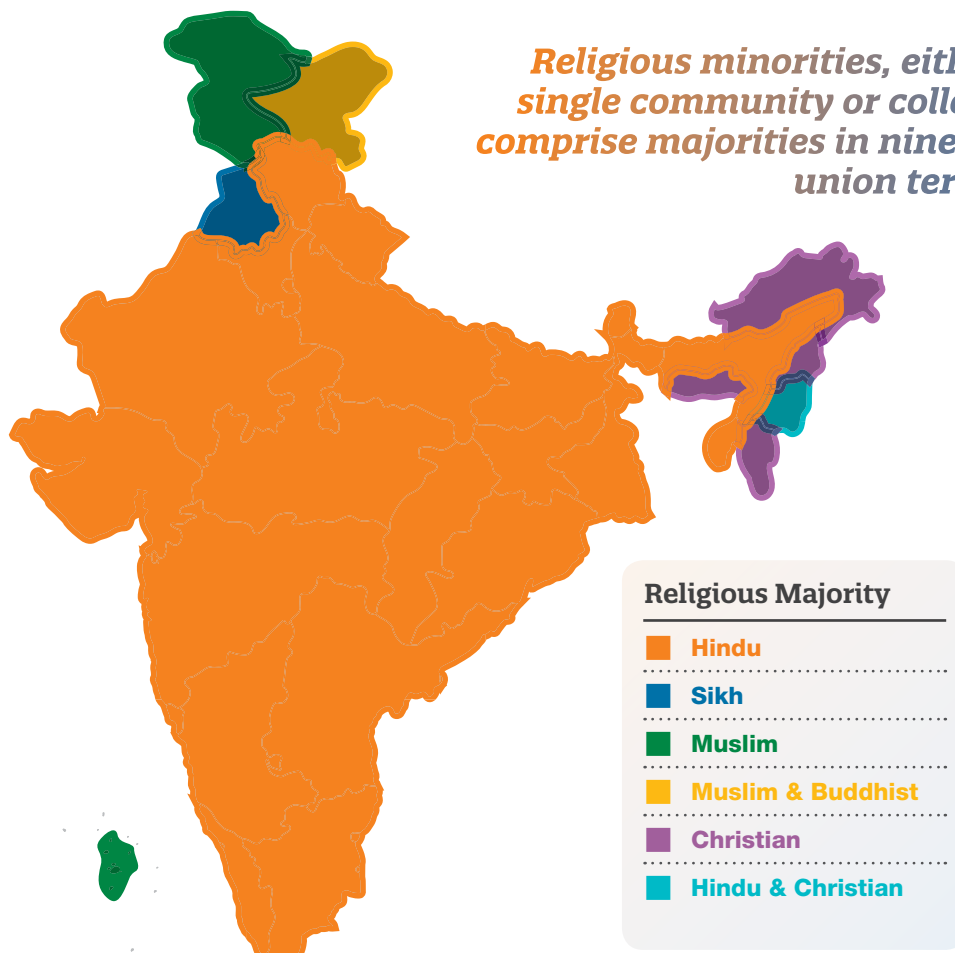

India's Diversity

India is home to unparalleled linguistic, cultural, and religious diversity. There are 22 constitutionally recognized languages and thousands of additional languages and dialects. Throughout its history, religion has been an important part of India's culture.

Hindus, a widely diverse populace, comprise a little less than 80% of India's 1.3 billion people, while religious minorities encompass a little over 20% of the population. In addition, India has the world's second largest Muslim population (approximately 176 million or 14.4%), and world's largest Sikh (1.9%), and Jain populations (0.4%). There are also substantial numbers of Christians (2.3%) and Buddhists (0.8%). Smaller communities of Jews, Baha'i, and Zoroastrians have been living in India for hundreds of years.

Subsequent to India's independence in 1947, the demographics of religious minorities have either increased or remained stable, and there have been no major religious migrations out of the country. For instance, the Muslim population has grown from 9.8% in 1951 to its current level of 14.4%, while the proportion of Christians, Sikhs, Buddhists, and Jains have stayed relatively the same. The Muslim population is projected to grow further to 18.4% by 2050, according to Pew Research Forum. Moreover, India is now home to the world's largest Baha'i community, estimated at over 2 million people, and the world famous Baha'i Lotus Temple in New Delhi. India is one of the few countries in the world where Baha'is and Jews have never faced religious persecution.

Religious minorities, either as a single community or collectively, comprise majorities in nine states/union territories.

India is also home to some of the world's most famous Islamic pilgrimage sites, including prominent Sufi shrines/dargahs (tombs of Muslim saints), such as Ajmer Sharif Dargah in Rajasthan and Haji Ali Dargah in Mumbai, as well as the world renowned Jama Masjid and Makkah Masjid mosques in Delhi and Hyderabad, respectively. Popular sacred Christian sites are also prevalent throughout India, including St. Thomas Cathedral in Mylapore and St. Xavier's shrine in Goa.

Religious demographics in India are complex, especially when examined regionally. Religious minorities, either as a single community or collectively, comprise majorities in nine states/union territories. Similarly, in many other states, minorities represent significant and influential segments of the population.

- › Punjab: Sikh majority
- › Jammu & Kashmir and Lakshadweep: Muslim majorities
- › Ladakh: Muslim majority with a significant Buddhist population
- › Arunachal Pradesh, Meghalaya, Mizoram, and Nagaland: Christian majorities
- › Manipur: equally Hindu and Christian, with minorities collectively comprising a majority
- › Kerala: Hindu (55%), Muslim (27%), and Christian (18%)

Refuge for Persecuted Religious Groups

Throughout its history, India has served as a refuge for persecuted religious groups or those fleeing violence from around the world.

- › Some Jewish communities in India trace their roots back over 2500 years, while others over the subsequent millenia, fleeing persecution from various parts of the Near and Middle East.
- › Zoroastrians arrived around 700 AD (they're now known as Parsis and Iranis in India), fleeing persecution in their native land of Persia, and integrated seamlessly into Indian society, while practicing their faith fully.
- › The Dalai Lama and Tibetan Buddhists fled to India after escaping Chinese oppression and established the Tibetan government in exile in the northern city of Dharamsala.

Tibetan refugees eating pani puri (traditional indian snack) in Dharamsala, India.

- ▶ Many Rohingya Muslims from Myanmar and Afghan Muslims have found a home in India as well.
- ▶ Pakistani, Bangladeshi, and Afghan Hindus have trickled into India for decades to escape religious persecution. They have struggled to obtain refugee status or any type of long term legal status in India, preventing them from accessing basic resources or employment. The current government in India, however, has made it a priority to grant legal resident status and citizenship to those fleeing religious persecution and seeking refuge in India.
- ▶ Ahmadiyya Muslims, who are outlawed in Pakistan, are free to worship, construct mosques, and propagate their faith free from government intrusion. The Sunni Waqf Board of India (a private religious body), however, does not consider them Muslim, and therefore does not grant Ahmadiyya membership or benefits of their services.

Democracy and Elections

As the world's largest democracy, India has a robust voting process in both state assembly and national parliamentary elections that involve thousands of candidates, dozens of political parties, and hundreds of millions of voters. Indian election law requires the use of secure electronic voting machines and a polling booth within two kilometers of every dwelling or home across the entire breadth and width of the country. National elections take place every five years and are conducted in seven phases and over a six week period, involving an estimated one million poll workers and 12 million voting booths.

The most recent national elections concluded in May 2019 and were the largest voting exercise in history, with over 600 million Indian voters participating (67.11% voter turnout). Prime Minister Narendra Modi and the Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) were elected for a second consecutive term after winning a majority 303 seats (the BJP's coalition partners won an additional 50 seats) in the national parliament out of 542 available seats. Support for the BJP and Prime Minister Modi in the elections cut across socio-economic, geographic, gender, and religious lines. Preliminary post-election data showed that:

- ▶ More than 1/3 of Dalits, considered the most disadvantaged social group in India, voted for the BJP.
- ▶ 50% of the seats in 90 minority-concentrated districts (districts with a significant minority population, and socio-economic and basic amenities parameters below the national average) were won by the BJP.
- ▶ Support from men (39%) and women (36%) for the BJP was relatively equal.

Secularism in Modern India

India is a secular democracy, but its unique brand of secularism provides unprecedented religious accommodations to its religious minority populace. Until 2018, the Government of India (GoI) provided a subsidy for 108,000 Muslims to complete the Hajj pilgrimage to Mecca annually, covering airfare, domestic travel, meals, medical care, and lodging assistance. From 2012 to 2014, for example, approximately $300 million was used towards this subsidy. The program was phased out by orders of the Supreme Court, and it was ended early in order to ensure subsidies were available for all minorities. Under a separate

GOI BUDGET EARMARKED FOR MINORITIES AFFAIRS MINISTRY

provision, however, $12.15 million a year is still allocated to assist Hajj pilgrims.

SUBSIDIES AND SPECIAL PROGRAMS

In the 2017-2018 Gol budget, $681.67 million was earmarked for the Minorities Affairs Ministry to benefit the country's religious minorities, reflecting an increase of over $81 million (62% increase) from the previous year. A primary focus in the budget increase was to focus on the education and social economic empowerment of Muslim women. The current government has also initiated several new welfare schemes for religious minorities, including Christians, Muslims, Sikhs, Buddhists, and Zoroastrians across the following broad areas: (1) educational empowerment, (2) economic empowerment, (3) infrastructure development, (4) special needs, and (5) support for institutions. For instance, the government recently utilized a $15 million World Bank loan to support skill development and training in madrasas that would benefit 35,000 Muslim students. Money has also been earmarked in the Union Budget for the celebration of Zoroastrian culture to help preserve their history, while the Prime Minister has promoted Buddhism and Sufi Islam through various programs.

...its unique brand of secularism provides unprecedented religious accommodations to its religious minority populace.

Sikh devotees praying at the Golden Temple in Punjab, India.

PERSONAL LAWS AND TRIPLE TALAQ

The Indian constitution and legal system protect religious freedom and ensure equality for all citizens, regardless of religious identity. However, religious minorities are provided separate, religion-based personal laws, which many civil rights advocates have criticized as being contrary to the principle of a secular democracy and for adversely impacting women.

"Triple Talaq" or the process for instant divorce under Islamic law, for example, has been a part of the personal law code for Muslims in India, despite it being outlawed in most Muslim majority countries, including Pakistan. "Triple Talaq" lacks any requirements for ex-spouses to pay alimony or child support, impoverishing millions of women and children. In response to this negative social impact on Muslim women and children, Prime Minister Narendra Modi proposed comprehensive legislation prohibiting the practice of "Triple Talaq" after India's Supreme Court struck it down as unconstitutional. After failing to pass through the Rajya Sabha (the upper house of parliament) in 2018, the Triple Talaq bill finally passed in both houses of the Indian parliament and was signed into law as the Muslim Women (Protection of Rights on Marriage) Act, 2019 on August 1, 2019. The bill was welcomed and lauded by Muslim women's rights groups across the country. Unlike Christians and Muslims, Sikhs, Buddhists, and Jains do not have separate personal laws and are considered Hindus under

...religious minorities are provided separate, religion-based personal laws, which many civil rights advocates have criticized as being contrary to the principle of a secular democracy...

Article 25(2)(b) of the constitution (though this constitutional reference pertains to opening religious institutions to all social classes rather than an explicit statement denying the separate religious identity of Sikhs, Buddhists, and Jains). Notably, Article 25(2)(b) also provides Sikhs the right to carry kirpans (ceremonial knife) as an article of their faith, a religious accommodation Sikhs are still advocating for in the US. But in the absence of a Uniform Civil Code (one set of laws for all Indians), which the current government has advocated for, these groups should be granted their own personal law code should they so seek.

Beyond personal laws, all religious minorities enjoy autonomy over their institutions and places of worship, free from government intrusion, while many Hindu institutions do not, thus falling victim to politicking, governmental corruption, mismanagement, and illegal sale of property.

REPRESENTATION IN CIVIL SOCIETY

India's diverse religious minorities are represented in all levels of civil service having attained the highest echelons of power in the Indian military, government, judicial system, civil service, bureaucracy, media, and private sector. These include Supreme Court Justices, Prime Ministers and Presidents, heads of the Indian Armed Forces, media icons, leading industrialists, and CEOs. Moreover, relative to their population size, Christians, India's diverse religious minorities are represented in all levels...

Sikhs, Jains, and Parsis are overrepresented in many fields and sectors.

STATE LEVEL

Several states have reserved quotas for Christians and Muslims for government seats and in the public sector. Additionally, India's Jewish community was recently accorded minority status in the State of Maharashtra, making them eligible for specific benefits, including travel to Jerusalem completely subsidized by the government. Similarly, Jains have been provided with minority status in the states of Gujarat and Telangana, making them eligible for government grants, scholarships, and other resources, in spite of being one of India's more affluent communities.

The decision to grant minority status at the state level is made on a state-by-state basis and is not appropriate in all circumstances, according to the Indian Supreme Court. For instance, in states where religious minorities constitute majority populations, such as Sikhs in Punjab, the Supreme Court found that given their numerical strength, economic and social status, and representation in government jobs, among other factors, minority status is unnecessary. Jaṭ Sikhs (the dominant Sikh caste group in Punjab), however, were granted backward class status by the Punjab government in 2014, making them eligible to receive reserved seats in government jobs.

COW PROTECTION LAWS

At the time of India's independence, the founders of the modern state sought to codify as policy the uniquely Indic ethos of compassion towards animals and the practical reality of the wealth cattle represents for people in a primarily agricultural society. Cow protection laws are thus rooted in and evolved from economic, cultural, and moral precepts, pre-dating the modern Republic of India, and do not stem from any animus towards Muslims and Christians.

Articles 48 (Directive Principles) and 51A(g) (Fundamental Duties) of the Constitution of India state respectively:

The State shall endeavor to organize agriculture and animal husbandry on modern and scientific lines and shall, in particular take steps for preserving and improving the breeds and prohibiting the slaughter of cows and calves and other milch and draught cattle.

Jewish Community and Synagogue of Ahmedabad, India
Photo credit: Emmanuel Dyan, Flickr

Cow protection laws are thus rooted in and evolved from economic, cultural, and moral precepts, pre-dating the modern Republic of India, and do not stem from any animus towards Muslims and Christians.

It shall be the Fundamental Duty of every citizen of India to protect and improve the natural environment including forests and to have compassion for living creatures.

The directive principles are not enforceable by writ, and similarly the fundamental duties cannot be mandated by a court of law. However, in furtherance of Article 48, most states (with the exception of Kerala and some of the Northeastern states, two states with significant Christian populations) have enacted laws related to the prohibition of slaughter of cows (and in some cases milch buffalo) and its progeny. There is also the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals Act of 1960 with subsequent amendments. According to animal welfare advocates, however, the laws protecting animals, not just cows, are toothless and enforcement dismal. They hold that both the central and state governments need to strengthen the extant legal and institutional framework with necessary amendments, provide adequate funding to carry out mandates, and, most importantly, promote enforcement.

The Supreme Court of India has held that cow protection laws do not impinge on the religious rights of others, based on the finding that Muslims are not required to slaughter cows for ritual practice, as some Muslim scholars have suggested.

No reference is made in the petition to any particular Surah of the Holy Quran which, in terms, requires the sacrifice of a cow.

All that was placed before us during the argument were Surah XXII, Verses 28 and 33, and Surah CVIII. What the Holy book enjoins is that people should pray unto the Lord and make sacrifice...It is therefore, optional for a Muslim to sacrifice a goat for one person or a cow or a camel for seven persons. It does not appear to be obligatory that a person must sacrifice a cow...

*Supreme Court of India,
Mohd. Hanif Qureshi and Others v.
State of Bihar (1958)*

And Muslims are free to legally slaughter goats or other animals during religious festivals and frequently do so. Moreover, the argument that the inability to eat beef deprives certain communities access to critical sources of nutrition is baseless, when access to other types of meat is easily available.

The media reports, from time to time, on vigilante violence committed in the name of cow protection. Very often, the issue is presented in oversimplified terms, with partial information, and as one rooted in religious conflict. In reality, these tragic incidents are mired in complicated local political and social dynamics, and largely stem from a violent cow smuggling epidemic and a failure of law and order. The communities most affected are rural poor of all caste and religious backgrounds—both as victims of cow theft and victims of circumstances that lead to having to work in the dangerous business of cow smuggling.

Rural poor, many of whom may consider their cows sacred, also and

Saint Mary's Syrian Orthodox church at Thiruvithancode, Tamil Nadu

Keshav Dev temple and Shahi Idgah mosque together in Mathura, India

very often view them as part of their family (similar to how one might view their pet dog or cat) and depend on them as an invaluable source of income and sustenance. And in the absence of adequate or responsive law enforcement, and worse yet where corrupt local officials themselves may be a part of the illicit trade, they feel forced to protect their cattle with whatever means available, including depending on or volunteering for community-watch type cow protection squads, or taking the law into their own hands. Those involved in cow smuggling are also victims—victims of a shadow economy, taking on significant risk to their personal safety and well-being by engaging in dangerous criminal activity in the absence of better economic opportunities. There is also the overlooked aspect of animal cruelty—the eyes and anus’ of cows are routinely gouged with chili powder or bodies injected with other substances to immobilize them; cows are tightly bound and crammed into transport vehicles with little room to move or defecate, let alone breathe; they’re starved of water and feed for days; or they’re ruthlessly beaten unconscious to be smuggled to illegal slaughterhouses across state borders or across the Indian border into Bangladesh.

This interstate and inter-country blackmarket is estimated to gross $5 billion a year, with some 3000 cattle per day being smuggled from India and Nepal into Bangladesh, and thousands a day within India’s borders. Where there are well-organized cow protection squads, some indicate a drop in smuggling. But there have also been reports of members of cow protection squads or individual “cow vigilantes” also profiting by extorting money for information. Prime Minister Modi has strongly warned cow protection squads against taking the law into their own hands and threatened full prosecution against any form of vigilantism or mob justice. There have also been dozens of individuals who have been tried and convicted for committing murder in the name of cow protection. The government has also sent advisories to all Indian states about the dangers cow smugglers pose not only to cattle, but increasingly to ordinary citizens who have faced violence and even murder because they’re seen as obstacles to the business.

These laws have not been consistently enforced resulting in few arrests and no convictions.

Indeed there have been isolated incidents of lynching of Muslim cattle traders by Hindu cow vigilantes that have rightly been portrayed as stemming from inter-religious tensions. But the key term is isolated. The vast majority is the result of organized crime.

HAF condemns all violence—against people and against animals—as it runs contrary to Hindu teachings regarding the sanctity of all life and ahimsa, or non-harming, and Hinduism’s history of mutual respect and pluralism, and urges the Government of India to invest more heavily in scaling and improving law enforcement alongside improving the economic opportunities and infrastructure available to India’s most vulnerable and rural populations, and also better enforcing extant animal cruelty prevention laws.

LAWS ON RELIGIOUS FREEDOM

From the colonial period to the present, Christian humanitarian efforts in India have been part of a systematic campaign to “harvest souls” through mass conversion and church planting initiatives, disrupting, and in some cases, decimating indigenous communities and inflaming religious tensions along the way. The Central India Christian Mission, a small US based group, alone has built over 1600 churches since 1982.

Converts are often asked to repudiate their community and family, reject traditions and customs that have been passed down for generations, and instructed to avoid attending religious ceremonies and celebrations that are the very basis of daily life. In some instances, converts are paid visits from church volunteers to ensure that the convert, who may have received a seat for their child in a church-run school, or much needed medical treatment at a faith-based clinic for their sick spouse, isn't reverting to the practice of their original faith.

The Freedom of Religion Acts were primarily formulated as a reaction to this type of religious imperialism, and were intended by "allurement" or "inducement." They are currently only in effect in the following six states: Arunachal Pradesh, Odisha, Madhya Pradesh, Chhattisgarh, Gujarat, and Himachal Pradesh. These laws have not been consistently enforced, resulting in few arrests and no convictions. Moreover, there is a lack of data showing that the laws have led to the inequitable treatment of religious minorities.

Ghar Wapsi (the process by which converted Hindu populations return to their original faith), on the other hand, pales in scope and magnitude to the conversion activities and predatory proselytization of missionary groups. Nonetheless, HAF opposes any forceful conversion or conversions sought through predatory means.

Inter-Religious Conflict in India

A tumultuous history of violence

...not been erased from the collective conscience of many Indians, and thus continues to color interreligious relations. While the initial flow of Muslims to the subcontinent was a result of trade and on the whole peaceful...

to prevent vulnerable populations from being preyed upon and falling victim to predatory efforts seeking religious conversion in exchange for or with the allurements of medical and humanitarian aid, education, or employment. The Freedom of Religion Acts are focused on protecting these vulnerable populations from conversions by "forcible" or "fraudulent" means, or against and subjugation of the religious majority and other indigenous religionists, as well as forced or state-abetted conversions of the same. This has not been erased from the collective conscience of many Indians, and thus continues to color interreligious relations. While the initial flow of Muslims to the subcontinent was a result of trade and on the whole peaceful, India first faced Islamist violence, dating as far back as the 8th century to the time of the Mughal invasions and rule through the mid-19th century. Later, colonization by European nations heavily promoted Christian proselytization and conversion, much of which was conducted by demonizing Hinduism and other Dharmic traditions. In modern times, identity politics, domestic and cross-border terrorism, radicalization, and aggressive and active foreign missionary campaigns of conversion within India's borders very often contribute to fomenting inter-religious misunderstanding and tensions.

Though there have not been major riots or attacks targeting religious minorities in India in recent years, there have been reports of individual incidents involving attacks by Hindus on Christians and Muslims. HAF unequivocally condemns these attacks and believes that any such violence is unacceptable and contravenes Hindu teachings and India's pluralistic ethos.

Religious violence in India has also taken the form of conflicts or riots between minority religious groups or between different sects within a religion. Muslims and Sikhs, for example, clashed in the southern city of Hyderabad in 2014 where the violence left at least three dead and 19 injured. Similarly, there has been a long history of Sunni-Shia (the two primary sects in Islam) violence in the city of Lucknow, especially during the Shia holy month of Muharram, and between Sikhs and the Nirankari, Ravidassia, and Dera Sacha Sauda sects in Punjab. Moreover, tensions and violence have also erupted between Muslims and Dalit communities in various parts of the country.

The causes of inter and intra-community religious violence in India have been complex and the culprits varied. According to Sadanand Dhume, a resident fellow at the American Enterprise Institute, "...[in] places like Assam, West Bengal and Uttar Pradesh, rapidly growing Muslim populations are no longer always a beleaguered minority. The reality of contemporary conflict is often messier, and much less one-sided, than in the past."

For instance, after a Hindu activist allegedly made derogatory remarks about the Prophet Mohammed, Muslims in the Muslim-majority district of Malda in West Bengal went on a violent rampage in January 2016, where they destruction of police vehicles and government property. Several Hindus were also injured and a 65-year old man, Kartik Ghosh, was stabbed to death by the rampaging mob.

And in 2019, a Muslim man in Jharkand was lynched to death by Hindus; a Hindu temple in Delhi was attacked by a Muslim mob; a Muslim devotee of the Hindu Deity Lord Rama was assaulted by his fellow Muslims; and a Ravidassia Dalit wedding procession passing in front of a mosque was attacked by Muslims.

Additionally, violence between Muslims and the tribal Bodo population (both Christians and Hindus) in Assam in 2013 affected all communities and involved several factors, including an influx of illegal migrants from Bangladesh into the state, while Hindu-Muslim riots in the state of Jammu & Kashmir disproportionately impacted Hindus.

Moreover, starting in 1989, over 350,000 Hindu Kashmiri Pandits (the indigenous population of Kashmir) were ethnically cleansed from their ancestral homeland in the state of Jammu & Kashmir by a radical insurgency orchestrated and funded by Pakistan's Inter-Services Intelligence Agency. These Hindus have not yet been able to return to the Kashmir Valley, and other Hindus living in the state are economically, politically, and socially marginalized. The Muslim majority state had also been granted special status under Articles 370 and 35A of the Indian Constitution, which restricted the Indian Parliament's legislative power over Jammu and Kashmir to defense, foreign affairs, and communications, and prevented non-resident Kashmiris from owning property in the state, including many displaced Kashmiri Hindus.

...350,000 Hindu Kashmiri Pandits (the indigenous population of Kashmir) were ethnically cleansed...

ransacked a police station, torched two dozen vehicles, and burned the shops and homes of Hindus.

Similarly, in July 2017, Muslim mobs attacked the Hindu community in Basirhat, Baduria and other neighboring areas in West Bengal, after news circulated that a Hindu high school student posted an allegedly blasphemous Facebook post about Islam. The riots lasted for several days and led to the vandalism and destruction of several dozen Hindu owned shops and homes, as well as the Articles 370 and 35A were officially abrogated by the Indian government on August 5, 2019, better integrating the residents of Jammu, Kashmir, and Ladakh into the Indian Republic, and creating conditions for the rehabilitation and resettlement of Kashmiri Pandits in the Kashmir Valley. And on August 6, 2019, the Indian government bifurcated the state of Jammu & Kashmir into two Union Territories: one for Ladakh, and one for Jammu and Kashmir itself. Religious and political leaders in Ladakh had long called for separate Union Territory status for Ladakh and complained of being socially and economically marginalized by state policies that favored the Kashmir Valley.

Hindu pilgrims visiting ancient religious sites in Jammu and Kashmir have further been frequent targets for terrorists, including known as the Khalistan (land of the pure) movement, peaked in the 1980s and 1990s, and involved bombings, political assassinations, kidnappings, selective killings, and massacres of civilians. According to the South Asia Terrorism Portal (SATP), there were approximately 21,631 fatalities from terrorism related violence since the insurgency began in 1981, of which 11,783 were civilians. The majority of the victims of the violence were innocent Sikhs, who were killed by separatists for opposing the Khalistan movement. Hindus were also targeted in large numbers and thousands were forced to flee their homes in Punjab. The violence took on an international dimension in 1985 when Khalistani separatists based in Canada exploded a bomb on an Air India flight, enroute from Toronto to New Delhi, killing all 329 people on board. In both its heyday pluralism and social justice, and many Sikhs venerate Hindu deities like Lord Rama and Goddess Sita, and Goddess Durga.

POST-CONFLICT JUSTICE

While the Indian law enforcement infrastructure's capacity for investigating and prosecuting crime, not just religiously-motivated crime, has significant limitations, there have been comprehensive investigations and arrests by law enforcement, as well as prosecution and convictions by the courts of those who have allegedly abetted or committed religiously-motivated crimes.

Examples include prosecution and convictions arising from conflicts in Odisha in 1999 and 2007-2008, in which Christians were the primary victims; Gujarat in 2002 where approximately 790 Muslims and 254 Hindus were killed; and the anti-Sikh pogrom of 1984, in which over 3,000 Sikhs were killed. Indeed, many perpetrators from some of these conflicts have not yet been brought to justice, however, investigations and cases are ongoing, special fast-track courts being set up, and a robust community of human rights activists continue to push for justice. In 2018, for instance, the Bharatiya Janata Party government set up a special commission to reexamine at least 75 cases in the anti-Sikh killings of 1984. As a result, a high-level Indian National Congress Party leader, Sajjan Kumar, along with four others were sentenced to life in prison, while two others were given 10 year sentences and one accused was given the death sentence, for the recent terror attack on a bus of Hindu pilgrims visiting the Amarnath shrine in July 2017 that killed seven people and left 20 injured. Additionally, Pakistan and China continue to illegally occupy significant parts of the state of Jammu & Kashmir, known as Pakistan Occupied Kashmir and Aksai Chin respectively.

...inter-religious violence takes numerous forms and has diverse culprits and countless victims...

And finally, radical Sikh separatists in the northern state of Punjab spearheaded a bloody terrorist campaign to carve out a separate state for Sikhs from the rest of India. The terrorist campaign, and today, the Khalistan movement has received financial and logistical support from pro-Khalistan separatists based in the United States, Canada, and the United Kingdom, as well as Pakistani intelligence services.

The movement and its fringe supporters seek to create divisions between Hindus and Sikhs, who have a long history of cooperation and have lived in harmony for centuries. Historically, Hindus have revered Guru Nanak, the founder of Sikhism, and the other Sikh Gurus for their contributions to religious their role in the anti-Sikh violence. The central government has also earmarked monetary grants to the victims and/or their families in many of these cases, including recently paying Rs. 500,000 each to a number of the families of Sikhs killed in 1984.

India has been a stabilizing force in the region...

There have been other smaller riots and sporadic incidents of violence, including the lynching of a Muslim man in Dadri in 2015 and riots in Muzaffarnagar in the state of Uttar Pradesh in September 2013. The Muzaffarnagar riots left 60 people dead and thousands displaced, including both Muslims and Hindus. Following the incident in Dadri, arrests were made within 72 hours, while the violence in Muzaffarnagar led to a Special Investigative Team (SIT) judicial probe to examine more than 400 registered cases that has already indicted several Muslim and Hindu leaders for their role in instigating the violence.

Moreover, individual incidents of violence on minorities have been swiftly dealt with by law enforcement. This includes the recent murder of a Muslim man in December 2017, caught on video at the perpetrator's request in order to broadcast the incident as a threat to India's Muslim community. The perpetrator was immediately apprehended by police, and tried for his crime.

Despite its limitations, the Indian judicial system in its entirety, from law enforcement to prosecution and conviction, does deliver justice consistently to victims of religiously-motivated crimes and does punish perpetrators of religiously-motivated crimes.

Furthermore, in some instances, reports of targeted attacks on minorities have been misreported in the media, including a spate of attacks on churches in early 2015. Although the incidents were portrayed as religiously motivated and a sign of rising religious intolerance under the current government, subsequent police investigations revealed that they were primarily crimes of opportunity, rather than incidents stemming from religious animus.

In addition, while Christian leaders have suggested that attacks on churches have increased under Prime Minister Modi's administration and have been religiously motivated, police statistics indicate that this has been the result of a general surge in crime, including the targeting of all places of worship. For instance, in the first month of 2015, at least 14 Hindu temples, five Sikh gurdwaras, and two mosques were robbed in Delhi. And in 2014, there were 206 Hindu temples vandalized and robbed compared to three churches.

Events throughout India's history have shown that inter-religious violence takes numerous forms and has diverse culprits and countless victims. There has never been a single theme to the events, and thus no one religious group is subject to blanket culpability. Nor has any single religious group been the sole target of attack or victimization. For instance, the 1984 anti-Sikh killings were not the result of any Hindu-Sikh conflict, but rather were the horrific outcome of a political separatist movement led by fringe elements amongst Sikhs living in Punjab and spurred on by Pakistani intelligence services coming to heads with the actions of the ruling Congress Party and Prime Minister Indira Gandhi—who was ultimately assassinated by her Sikh bodyguards. In fact, during the 1984 anti-Sikh killings, many Hindus protected and sheltered their Sikh neighbors and friends from violent mobs. Moreover, according to prominent Sikh author, Kushwant Singh, socio-religious organizations, such as the Rashtriya Swayamsevak Sangh led efforts to protect Sikhs from violence.

India and Her Neighbors

India is considered the dominant economic, political, cultural, and military power in South Asia. It shares extensive civilizational and cultural ties with its neighbors, including Pakistan, Bangladesh, Afghanistan, Sri Lanka, Nepal, Bhutan, and the Maldives. In fact, these countries constitute the South Asian Association for Regional Cooperation, a regional forum to strengthen cooperation amongst themselves. India's other prominent neighbor, China, has increasingly attempted to exert its economic and military influence in South Asia in recent years, at times leading to territorial disputes with India.

India's immediate neighborhood has also been highly volatile with the prevalence of both overt military conflict and asymmetric warfare destabilizing the region. Since 1947, for instance, Pakistan has initiated three full-fledged wars with India and a smaller incursion into Indian territory in Kargil in 1999. In addition, Pakistan has consistently utilized cross-border terrorism in India as an official instrument of state policy, including the 26/11 Mumbai attacks that killed 166 people, the attack on an Indian air force base in Kashmir in 2016 that left 17 Indian Army personnel dead, and the 2019 attack that killed 40 members of the Central Reserve Police Force in Pulwama district of Kashmir, to name a few. Pakistan's military and ISI spy agency also continues to support the Taliban, the Haqqani group, Lashkar-e-Taiba, Jaish-e-Mohammad, and other affiliated militant groups in Afghanistan to undermine U.S. military operations and maintain its strategic influence there. International security analysts and intelligence reports from several countries, including the U.S., have confirmed the role of Pakistan's military and ISI in these activities in India and Afghanistan.

An escalation in religious violence against minorities and the growing power of radical Islamists in Pakistan and Bangladesh has also contributed to large-scale migrations of Hindus into India. The civil war in Sri Lanka between the Sinhala-Buddhist dominated government and the ethnic Tamil minority, and continuing state sponsored repression, has further led large numbers of Tamils (mostly Hindus) to seek refuge in India's southern Tamil Nadu state. Similarly, discriminatory policies by Bhutan's Buddhist majority government forced more than 100,000 minority Hindus to flee to neighboring Nepal and India, many of whom have now been resettled in the U.S.

India has been a stabilizing force in the region, has never supported terrorism or the proliferation of nuclear weapons, and has invested billions of dollars in neighboring economies and the rebuilding of Afghanistan.

Recommendations

It is critical that the U.S. continues to strengthen relations with India, the only consistent democracy in South Asia, in order to bring greater stability to the region and prevent the growth of radical Islamist and Communist/Maoist terrorism that is impacting the lives of innocent civilians, causing domestic unrest, and forcing large scale migrations of Hindu refugees (and other religious minorities) from Pakistan and Bangladesh into India.

Dialogue and bilateral relations with India should focus on trade ties, regional security issues, and global strategic partnerships.

Resources

"Abolish Haj Subsidy in 10 Years: Supreme Court to Government," May 9, 2012, The Times of India, <http://timesofindia.indiatimes.com/India/Abolish-haj-subsidy-in-10-years-Supreme-Court-to-government/articleshow/13059420.cms>

Ahmed, Khalid, "The Lucknow Connection" May 12, 2014, The Indian Express, <http://indianexpress.com/article/opinion/columns/the-lucknow-connection>

"Aligarh: Muslim Ram Devotee Beaten Up, Gets Death Threats by Community Members for Reading Ramayana, Gita," July 6, 2019, Swarajya, <https://swarajyamag.com/insta/aligarh-muslim-ram-devotee-beaten-up-gets-death-threats-by-community-members-for-reading-ramayana-gita>

Anand, Utkarsh, "Can Sikhs be a Minority in Punjab, Asks Apex Court," January 19, 2016, The Indian Express, <http://indianexpress.com/article/india/india-news-india/can-sikhs-be-a-minority-in-punjab-asks-apex-court/#sthash.5TvBBiyK.dpuf>

Amin, Sameen and Jordan, Drew, "India's Elections Last 39 Days. Here's Why," New York Times, <https://www.nytimes.com/video/world/asia/10000006449815/india-election-2019.html>

"Anti-Hindu Riots in West Bengal Further Disturbing Violent Trend," July 14, 2017, HAF, <https://www.hafsite.org/anti-hindu-riots-west-bengal-further-disturbing-violent-trend>

"Attack on Amarnath Yatra Pilgrims, 'Unconscionable' Say HAF Leaders," July 10, 2017, HAF, <https://www.hafsite.org/attack-amarnath-pilgrims-unconscionable-say-haf-leaders>

Ayub, Jamal, "62% Increase in Funding for Minority Affairs in Union Budget," February 1, 2018, Times of India, <https://timesofindia.indiatimes.com/business/india-business/62-increase-in-funding-for-minority-affairs-in-union-budget/articleshow/62742314.cms>

"Backgrounder - Punjab," South Asia Terrorism Portal, <http://www.satp.org/satporgtp/countries/india/states/punjab/backgrounder/index.html>

Baha'i Faith: The Official Website of Baha'is of India, <http://www.bahai.in/bahai-house-of-worship/>

Bhardwaj, Ananya, "PM Narendra Modi Summons Police Commissioner BS Bassi After Christian School 'Robbed'," The Indian Express, <http://indianexpress.com/article/cities/delhi/pm-narendra-modi-summons-police-commissioner-b-s-bassi-after-robbery-at-christian-school>

"Census of India: Religion," 2001, Government of India, Ministry of Home Affairs, http://censusindia.gov.in/Census_And_You/religion.aspx

Central India Christian Mission, <https://indiamission.org/what-we-do/evangelism>

Chaulia, Sreeram, "Modi in Action: Cultural Diplomacy," May 17, 2016, Sri Lanka Gaurdian, <http://www.slgaurdian.org/2016/05/modi-in-action-cultural-diplomacy>

"Communal Tensions in MP Village After Muslims Attack Dalit Wedding Procession, Dewas Authorities Imposes Section 144," May 31, 2019, First Post, <https://www.firstpost.com/india/communal-tensions-in-mp-village-after-muslims-attack-dalit-wedding-procession-dewas-authorities-imposes-section-144-6736031.html>

"Crying Wolf: The Narrative of the Delhi Church Attacks Flies in the Face of Facts," February 17, 2015, FirstPost, <http://www.firstpost.com/india/crying-wolf-the-narrative-of-the-delhi-church-attacks-flies-in-the-face-of-facts-2101105.html>

"Delhi Policeman Found Involved in Muzaffarnagar Riots," June 7, 2014, The Hindu, <http://www.thehindu.com/news/national/other-states/delhi-policeman-found-involved-in-muzaffarnagar-riots/article6092328.ece>

"Delhi Temple Attack: How a Parking Scuffle Led to Communal Tension in Hauz Qazi," July 2, 2019, India Today, <https://www.indiatoday.in/india/story/delhi-temple-attack-how-a-parking-scuffle-led-to-communal-tension-in-hauz-qazi-1560545-2019-07-02>

Dhume, Sadanand, "Reinventing Indian Secularism," January 29, 2016, American Enterprise Institute, <http://www.aei.org/publication/reinventing-indian-secularism>

Dhume, Sadanand "A Better Deal for India's Muslims," April 21, 2013, The Wall Street Journal, <http://online.wsj.com/news/articles/SB10001424127887324165204579026292455938628>

Ghosh, Abantika and Singh Vijaita "Census: Hindu share dips below 80%, Muslim share grows but slower," The Indian Express, <http://indianexpress.com/article/india/india-others/census-hindu-share-dips-below-80-muslim-share-grows-but-slower/>

Gill, K.P.S., "Punjab: The Knights of Falsehood," SATP, <http://www.satp.org/satporgtp/publication/nightsoffalsehood/falsehood4.htm>

Gujarat Government Accords Minority Status to Jain Community," May 8, 2016, NDTV, <http://www.ndtv.com/india-news/gujarat-government-accords-minority-status-to-jain-community-1403916>

"Gujarat Govt to Seek Death for Maya Kodnani," The Hindu, <http://www.thehindu.com/news/national/other-states/gujarat-govt-to-seek-death-for-maya-kodnani/article4626829.ece>

Gupta, Pranav and Kumar, Sanjay, "Where Did the BJP Get Its Votes From in 2019?" June 3, 2019, Live Mint, <https://www.livemint.com/politics/news/where-did-the-bjp-get-its-votes-from-in-2019-1559547933995.html>

"Haj 2015: India's Arrangement for a Smoother Pilgrimage," August 24, 2015, India Today, <http://indiatoday.intoday.in/story/haj-2015-indias-arrangement-for-a-smoother-pilgrimage/1/460704.html>

"Hindus in South Asia and the Diaspora: A Survey of Human Rights 2013," HAF, http://hafsites.org/resources1?q=resources/human_rights_report

"India's ratio of 138 police personnel per lakh of population fifth lowest among 71 countries," July 13, 2018, <https://economictimes.indiatimes.com/news/defence/indias-ratio-of-138-police-personnel-per-lakh-of-population-fifth-lowest-among-71-countries/articleshow/48264737.cms>

"India's Sikhs: Heresy and History," July 5, 2007, The Economist, <http://www.economist.com/node/9444533>

"Jammu and Kashmir Assessment – Year 2014," SATP, <http://www.satp.org/satporgtp/countries/india/states/jandk/index.html>

"Jharkhand: Arrests Over Lynching of India Muslim Man," June 24, 2019, BBC News, <https://www.bbc.com/news/world-asia-india-48742961>

"Kandhamal Riots Probe Commission Issues Notice," October 21, 2012, The New Indian Express, <http://www.newindianexpress.com/states/odisha/article1309345.ece#.UzxR-7uPKW8>

Khadasi, Samar, "Jews in Maharashtra to get Minority Status, Free Trip to Jerusalem," May 18, 2016, The Times of India, <http://timesofindia.indiatimes.com/india/Jews-in-Maharashtra-to-get-minority-status-free-trip-to-Jerusalem/articleshow/52324747.cms>

Lalchandani, Neha, "1984 Riots: Govt to Give Sikhs Relief Out of Own Kitty," October 30, 2015, The Times of India, <http://timesofindia.indiatimes.com/city/delhi/1984-riots-Govt-to-give-Sikhs-relief-out-of-own-kitty/articleshow/49589128.cms>

"Law of Maintenance in India under Personal Laws: An Analysis," Lawyers Club India, <http://www.lawyersclubindia.com/articles/Law-of-Maintenance-in-India-under-Personal-Laws-An-Analysis--5551.asp#.Uz0o3Pn7dWY>

Maan, Surinder, "Dera Sacha Sauda Followers and Radical Sikh Organizations Clash; Five Dera Followers Injured," November 26, 2013, Hindustan Times, <http://www.hindustantimes.com/punjab/bathinda/dera-sacha-sauda-followers-and-radical-sikh-organisations-clash-five-dera-followers-injured/article1-1155986.aspx>

Martins, Reena, "A dark trade," July 22, 2017, The New Indian Express, <http://www.newindianexpress.com/magazine/2017/jul/22/a-dark-trade-1631340--2.html>

"Minority Affairs Ministry Gets RS 3827 Crore in Budget," February 29, 2016, The Economic Times, <http://economictimes.indiatimes.com/news/economy/finance/minority-affairs-ministry-gets-rs-3827-crore-in-budget-2016/articleshow/51199252.cms>

"Minority Affairs Budget Increased by Over 87 Crores for 2016-17," March 4, 2016, Press Information Bureau, Ministry of Minority Affairs, Government of India, <http://pib.nic.in/newsite/PrintRelease.aspx?relid=137315>

"My Goal is to Bring Most Backward People on Path of Development: Heptulla," May 26, 2016, The Times of India, <http://timesofindia.indiatimes.com/city/delhi/My-goal-is-to-bring-most-backward-people-on-path-of-development-Heptulla/articleshow/52455357.cms>

"Muslim Delegation Meets PM Modi, Praise Development Focus," April 13, 2016, NDTV, <http://www.ndtv.com/india-news/muslim-delegation-meets-pm-modi-praises-his-welfare-schemes-1395245>

"Muzaffarnagar Riots: 10 Muslim Leaders Charged by SIT," March 8, 2014, The Times of India, <http://timesofindia.indiatimes.com/india/Muzaffarnagar-riots-10-Muslim-leaders-charged-by-SIT/articleshow/31656635.cms>

Nelson, Dean, "Kashmir: Violence Escalates Between Hindus and Muslims," August 11, 2013, The Telegraph, <http://www.telegraph.co.uk/news/worldnews/asia/india/10236064/Kashmir-Violence-escalates-between-Hindus-and-Muslims.html>

Outcome Budget, Ministry of Minority Affairs, Government of India, <http://www.minorityaffairs.gov.in/planandbudget>

Pew-Templeton Global Religious Futures Project, Pewforum.org, http://www.globalreligiousfutures.org/countries/india/religious_demography#/?affiliations_religion_id=0&affiliations_year=2050

Prabhu, Sridhar, "An 'Unholy' Alliance Against the Triple Talaq Bill," February 14, 2018, Swarajya, <https://swarajyamag.com/politics/an-unholy-alliance-against-the-triple-talaq-bill>

"Prime Minister Letter to Jain Delegation," January 31, 1950, https://wiki2.org/en/Legal_status_of_Jainism_as_a_distinct_religion_in_India#/media/File:PMO_letter_to_Jains.jpg

PTI, "President Gives Assent to Triple Talaq Bill," July 31, 2019, The Times of India, <https://timesofindia.indiatimes.com/india/president-gives-assent-to-triple-talaq-bill/articleshow/70476310.cms>

"Punjab Gives BC Status to Jat Sikhs," March 5, 2014, The Hindu, <http://www.thehindu.com/news/national/other-states/punjab-gives-bc-status-to-jat-sikhs/article5754237.ece>

"Rajasthan Murder Caught on Video: Cops say 'Premeditated Killing', family wants accused to be hanged publicly," <https://www.hindustantimes.com/india-news/rajasthan-murder-caught-on-video-cops-say-premeditated-killing-family-wants-accused-to-be-hanged-publicly/story-tbnAOd9aLDTxs5zITEmZKO.html>

"Several Cong Leaders Indicted for Anti-Sikh Riots," August 8, 2005, Express India, <http://www.expressindia.com/news/fullstory.php?newsid=52345>

Sharma, Ruchir Ferrero, "India Doesn't Have A Cow Vigilante-Muslim Lynching Problem But A Mob Justice-Meat Mafia Problem That Can Be Solved," April 27, 2019, Swarajya, <https://swarajyamag.com/politics/india-doesnt-have-a-cow-vigilante-muslim-lynching-problem-but-a-mob-justice-meat-mafia-problem-that-can-be-solved>

Shekhar, Raj, "Christian School Vandalized in South Delhi," February 13, 2015, The Times of India, <http://timesofindia.indiatimes.com/city/delhi/Christian-school-vandalized-in-south-Delhi/articleshow/46227841.cms>

Shri Vayalar Ravi, Subsidy for Haj Pilgrimage, Government of India, Ministry of Civil Aviation, Lok Sabha–Question No. 2125, March 2011.

Shukla, Madhuri, "Muslims are still Better off in Gujarat," July 20, 2013, Governance Now, <http://www.governancenow.com/news/blogs/muslims-are-still-better-gujarat>

Singh, Akhilesh Kumar, "Parliament Passes Article 370 Changes, Bifurcation of J&K," August 6, 2019, The Times of India, <https://timesofindia.indiatimes.com/india/parliament-passes-article-370-changes-bifurcation-of-jk/articleshow/70561690.cms>

Singh, Pramod Kumar, "Christianity is not Being Crucified, Assures Top Cop," Daily Pioneer, <http://archive.dailypioneer.com/city/christianity-is-not-being-crucified-assures-top-cop.html>

Singh, Sumit Kumar, "Stealing Communal Advantage Leaves Cops Fuming," February 15, 2015, The New Indian Express, <http://www.newindianexpress.com/thesundaystandard/Stealing-Communal-Advantage-Leaves-Cops-Fuming/2015/02/15/article2668964.ece>

"SIT Faces Uphill Task as Muzaffarnagar Riot Cases Rise to 400," March 14, 2014, The Indian Express, <http://indianexpress.com/article/india/india-others/sit-faces-uphill-task-as-muzaffarnagar-riot-cases-rise-to-400>

"SIT File Indictment Against 10 Muslim Leaders Over UP Riots," Oman Tribune, <http://www.omantribune.com/index.php?page=news&id=163268&heading=India>

South Asian Association for Regional Cooperation, <http://www.saarc-sec.org>

"State Anti-Conversion Laws in India," Library of Congress, <https://www.loc.gov/law/help/anti-conversion-laws/india.php>

"The Constitution of India," <http://lawmin.nic.in/olwing/coi/coi-english/coi-indexenglish.htm>

"The Indian State of Assam: Causes and Origins of Conflict," HAF Policy Brief, http://www.hafsite.org/sites/default/files/Assam_Cause_Origin_Conflict_Brief.pdf

"The Indian State of Jammu and Kashmir Policy Brief: 2011-2012," HAF Policy Brief, <http://hafsite.org/media/pr/kashmir-policy-brief-2011-2012>

"The Kishtwar Cauldron," August 16, 2013, India Today, <http://indiatoday.intoday.in/story/kishtwar-violence-jammu-and-kashmir-omar-abdullah-national-conference/1/299803.html>

Part 1: "The Muslim Gaurakshaks | A Journey With The Gaurakshaks Of Ramgarh | Unique Stories From India," March 25, 2017, 101 India https://www.youtube.com/watch?time_continue=291&v=9Lc3v5R78rl

Part 2: "The Hindu Gaurakshaks | A Journey With The Gaurakshaks of Ramgarh | Unique Stories From India," March 25, 2017, 101 India <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=GbGmCKIsVmM>

"Vikaspuri Church Attack Result of Drunk Bet," January 16, 2015, The Times of India, <http://timesofindia.indiatimes.com/city/delhi/Vikaspuri-Church-attack-result-of-drunk-bet/articleshow/45905292.cms>

"1984 Anti-Sikh Riots were Genocide, Says Rajnath Singh," December 26, 2014, NDTV, <http://www.ndtv.com/india-news/1984-anti-sikh-riots-were-genocide-says-rajnath-singh-718636>

"1984 Anti-Sikh Pogrom: The Need for Justice," HAF, <https://www.hafsite.org/media/pr/1984-anti-sikh-pogrom-need-justice>

"World's Muslim Population More Widespread Than You Might Think," June 7, 2013, Pew Research Center, <http://www.pewresearch.org/fact-tank/2013/06/07/worlds-muslim-population-more-widespread-than-you-might-think>

Hindu American Foundation

Promoting dignity, mutual respect, and pluralism.

www.hafsite.org